Greater Health is part of the Australian Government's UDRH initiative. It is a program that combines major academic institutions, health services, industry groups and communities, to promote Greater Health in the region.

Greater Health is a Flinders University and Deakin University partnership and is funded by the Australian Government Department of Health and Ageing.

We promote Greater Health through our education, training and research programs, which have a strong public and health service focus.

Greater Health supports nursing, medical, allied health, dentistry and pharmacy students from universities across Australia.
